Features: The service is automatically started and managed from the Task Manager. It works for all days of the week. Users can configure the time by writing into a JSON file. Settings are read at start-up and are overwritten every minute. Settings can be modified at will, so they can be changed as they are overwritten. Version 1.3 (August 1, 2016) Added support for running the app on the Internet. For that, a new subdomain has been created and the service was modified to always go to the subdomain when a request to the “www” is received. The app also loads the settings directly from the subdomain. To keep it secure, a user must have a valid password for the system. Added support for the day of the week. Now the service checks that the day is within the configured parameters. Version 1.2 (August 1, 2016) Reworked the settings of the application, changed the format of the app to JSON and added an option to disable the time configuration. Version 1.1 (August 1, 2016) First release. License: License is GNU General Public License version 3 or later.
