"ColorPick" is a utility program that runs on the taskbar of the desktop and provides quick access to the PacketFence Web Security Appliance 10.2.0 is now available. This is the first maintenance release of PacketFence Web Security Appliance 10.2, the new version of our web security appliance (WSA) software. The new version introduces many important enhancements and improvements, as well as several noteworthy bug fixes. Web security appliances (WSA) are typically used in offices, laboratories and other locations. Their purpose is to provide server-based web authentication and access control for users from external networks. WSA is a vendor-neutral, open-source technology that works with most popular web servers, including: Apache, nginx, lighttpd, Microsoft IIS, Amazon EC2, NGINX, and many more. We have made several other key enhancements and improvements since the release of PacketFence 10.1. These include enhancements to: WSA Connect and WSA Auditor; introduction of support for the Atos Apollo unified threat management system (UTM); support for ProxyStrike Premium; support for the B2S SSH tunneling service; and introduction of the Windows client and remote admin tools. Thanks to all our users for providing us with valuable feedback and support for the first 10.2 release! Without your continued help and advice, we would not be able to make these improvements and fixes. The enthusiasm and support of our customers is essential for the continuing success and long-term development of our software. Download PacketFence Web Security Appliance 10.2 for Linux, Windows, and macOS. Main enhancements in 10.2: Front page enhancements in WSA Connect and WSA Auditor In WSA Connect and WSA Auditor, you can now select a WSA as the new default server in a web browser window. When the user types the server name in the browser window, the default WSA will be chosen to provide the best web experience, including having the most relevant content for the user: a list of the most frequently used WSA servers, or those with the best internet speed. You can also optionally select a WSA when a URL begins with a server name. To help users avoid accidentally selecting a different WSA, the front page includes a friendly notification of the current server selection. For example: "Your web browser is about to open a new connection to 'localhost' on port 80.

ColorPick is the most popular tool for all the color pickers which ever were, is and will be created. There are thousands of web sites which also offer such an application for their visitors. In fact, such sites are coming up more frequently on the internet. Such web sites use different functions like URL-redirect or a great number of cookie driven funnels. As a result, ColorPick is a multi-purpose and popular color picker. Even if you want to download the most up to date version of the application, you will not find it when searching by the Google search engine. This program offers three different methods of use. They are divided into 8 groups: selection of a color from a palette, selection of a color in an image, color selection by dragging a color, selection of a color by closing palettes, selection of a color by color palette, selection of a color in a document, selection of a color in an image, and selection of a color in a video. The application does not feature any annoying ads. It is a powerful and highly customizable tool to let you pick up colors from images and create your very own color palettes. You can adjust almost every detail of the application's look and feel in your personal settings. The application itself is responsive to any platform. It features a convenient and intuitive interface, and also runs on all the most popular and recent web browsers. You can use the application for free and continue even if you don't want to buy a premium. It's possible to adjust its color pickers and create new palettes. The program is easy-to-use. All you need to do is open it, select your color picker or color palette and start choosing the colors that suit your needs. Best of all, the application is free! The advertisement-supported version, however, features several useful ad-blocking tools, which you can turn off at any moment. In our testing, the use of the free version was quick and easy, thanks to the intuitive interface. It features the following color pickers: flat color picker, circle color picker, radial color picker, swatch color picker, gradient color picker, and other palettes. It is easy to customize your color pickers. You are offered 3D look for different perspectives of your palettes. The application contains various filters to modify its look and feel. There are also plenty of tools to let you pick up specific colors from an image. The latter not only includes
