Visit 5pb. for more information about 5pb. Developed by Nitroplus Published by 5pb. Released for PC on January 31, 2016 Published by Kadokawa Dwango By day, you're a seventh-grade science teacher. By night, you're a space time/age-traveling hacker. But if your teacher's scissors cut away too much of your school uniform, you're subjected to a world of hurt! Collect bits of your uniform and equip it to help you fight monsters in your teens and twenties. Play with your teacher's or a student's hair or put on a bridal maid's outfit and take your fight to the girls! Are you feeling lucky? Then you better hope the "B" in your name stands for "Bull"! ■Storyline A kind person has been pretty much idealized in your life, right? Even if you're a supernatural being, the person you believed to be that kind person is still the same person." So there was nothing unusual about the novel "Namida no Hibi" that was passed around and read in junior high. That book, however, was slightly different than others. "This is a story of a young boy who reunites with his childhood friend, a supernatural being." But the last line of the novel: "But the supernatural being that he saw never returns." The very last word of that book itself was "never". Could his childhood friend be returning? No matter how kind and understanding they were to each other, the story never progressed. Something must have happened, right? You'll have to find out on your own whether or not that's the case, though! Check out

>Q: How to load jquery and google maps into the same php page? I have a page that was working without the google maps API. I am converting that page over to use google maps because I have changed the way that the map loads. How do I load the map into that page? I want to keep everything on that page the same except for the way the map loads. A: If you are loading the page from PHP, then you can call the google JS API through the script parameter.
