experience. You have full parachute control after a designated parachute auto-deploy in each level. Choose to aim for the designated red zone or wander off to as far as you can go. Have you gone skydiving today? Nostalgic 80's design and feel goes in to Skydiving Simulator VR, giving you full control over your parachute and the position of your Vibration feedback. This allows you to come face-to-face with the beautiful landscapes of the sky and be very, very afraid. Because Skydiving Simulator VR is a free-range parachuting experience designed from the ground up for HTC Vive and Oculus Rift, it uses Oculus Touch controllers and 3D on-screen location and communication tools to allow for the best VR experience possible. Skydiving Simulator VR comes in two parts: Part 1 and Part 2. In Part 1 you can choose from three different level types: Part 1 = Grassplains: In this level type you are free to wander the sky to as far as you can go, with the uppermost limit being determined by the size of the Skybox. Along your journey you can drop in the designated Red Zone and fly in the most scenic view of the virtual area in front of you. Part 1 = Future City: Pick up your parachute and select a designated landing zone. Your parachute will auto-deploy once you've entered the ground impact area. In this level type you'll need to cross a city. Part 1 = Tropical Islands: This level type is the closest to what real skydiving would be like. Choose a designated landing zone, pack your parachute and jump in! You'll jump and dive into beautiful landscapes of a tropical island of the Bahamas and you have full control over the parachute. One of the biggest criticisms of the budget announced earlier this year by then-Finance Minister Bill English was that it did not make any substantial cuts to the pay and allowances of public servants. In return for their political bravery in cutting $290 million from their pay and allowances over the next three years, the Finance Ministry suggested, NZ First would be able to absorb the price increases that would occur over the next four years.
